EDITOR IN DISTRESS

If you like your ladies blonde with juicy asses than you better get down to the Spearmint Rhino Club this weekend to see the gorgeous Kagney Linn Karter (also goes by Carter) feature dance.

She is originally from Texas and I'm sure she's looking forward to a nice Texas home coming. I'm not sure what time she performs, but her first performance is Thursday, Oct. 22, so give Spearmint Rhino a call (214-902-0700) that day. If you can't wait one day, than head to your nearest porn shop and get a copy of Deviance (reviewed this week) or Not Married With Children XXX. I'm gonna do my best to catch her show Thursday since Friday I'll be at... Burlesque Nocturne at the Lakewood Theater. More info on show available from Miss Vivienne Vermuth on page 15.

Mister sports writer Two Dogs forgot to mention UFC 104 with the light heavy-weight championship up for grabs with Champion Lyoto Machida versus Mauricio Rua. I'll be cheering for Lyoto because he's a badass and a gentleman, unlike mister cocky Mauricio. Also fighting is undefeated heavyweight Cain Velazquez Vs. former IFL Champion Ben Rothwell, Anthony Johnson Vs. Yoshiyuki Yoshida, Antoni Hardonk Vs. Pat Barry, Gleison Tibau Vs. Josh Neer and lots more. UFC 104 is this Saturday, Oct. 24 and you can order it through your cable provider or see it with some hot ladies on your lap at Silver City or Spearmint Rhino.

Doubt I can make it but famous Dallas photographer Leroy Roper is having his first annual Body Art Gala at Plush (1400 Main Street, Dallas). There will be a special performance by Tiffany Diamond plus a variety of models representing the living art of Leroy Thompson.

Next week is Halloween. I'll see about conjuring up a spooky feature for ya. I guess I'll be dressing up as Lemmy from Motorhead since everyone says I look like him now with my big side burns. Have a deviant weekend. -Gil

I'm A Mac. Kids Are PCs.

I don't have any kids, but I have several Apple computers.

It has occurred to me that if kids were more like Macs and less like PCs, I might be more willing to cash in what I know to be the freedom to go to a fucking movie ten minutes before it starts if the thought doesn't occur to me until right then. Please allow me to show you what I mean.

Macs have all of their software preloaded. Everything you need to enjoy your Mac was affixed to your baby on the assembly line during gestation. PCs are a shell that counts on you to add on and coax it through every little upgrade and enhancement, and the cooler the trick, the more money it costs.

Macs are purchased at The Apple Store, which has the look and feel of the V.I.P. room of the most happening club in town. PCs are purchased at generic retailers, still smelling like popcorn from their bacteria infested snack bar two weeks after you get it home.

Macs even come in cool packaging. Modular clean white boxes that have an inherent sense of style and design. PCs are chunky and awkward, with a look so uncoordinated that they make Courtney Love look well appointed and intentional.

Macs don't get viruses. PCs are an electronic invitation to an infestation of cyber worms that you can practically see when they wipe their noses with their hands and then want to touch yours with theirs.

It is even evident in the dichotomy of Apple's ad campaign.

Who would you rather be? The Mac guy, who looks like he sleeps as late as he wants and fucks Drew Barrymore? Or the PC guy, who looks like, and no doubt is, someone's actual dad. A pressed shirt, gold wire framed glasses wearing mess of cubicle dwelling mediocrity that looks like he cries when he masturbates.

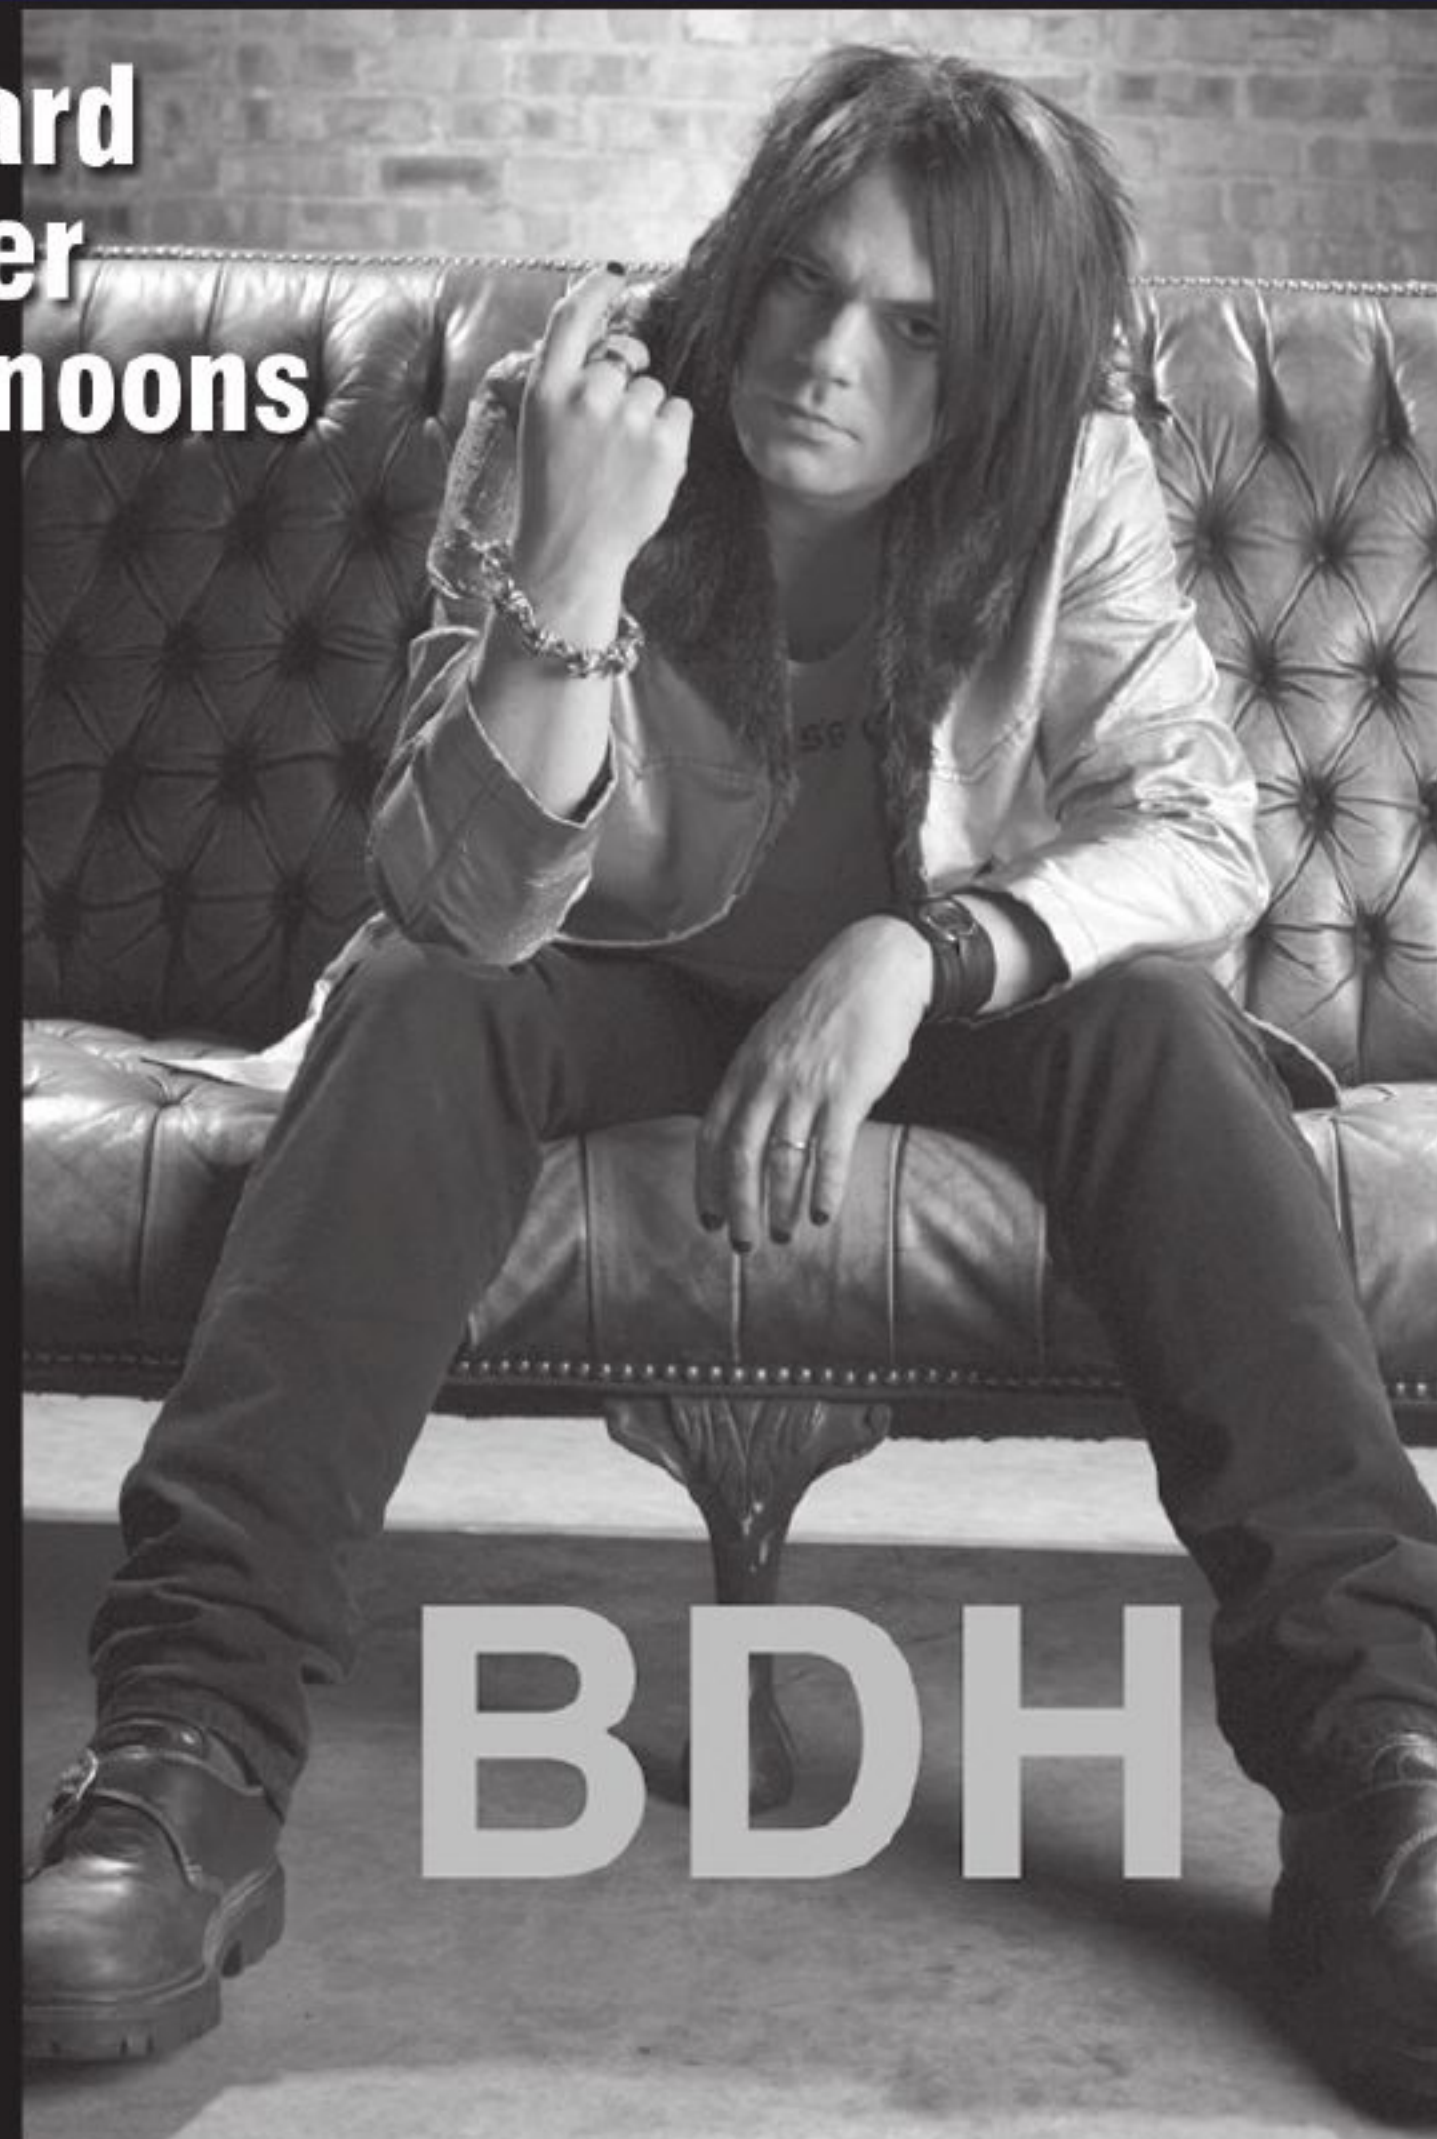

If Macs were children, Steve Jobs would no doubt prove his superior design abilities to those of whatever God you think is real by once again, pre-installing, at no additional charge, an expansive software suite called iReason, that would instill in your precious little pumpkin the immediate deductive reasoning skills to understand that at 5:00 am people are sleeping, and that shitting in your pants is something that is completely avoidable with a simple software update notification.

It doesn't seem too late to employ a little genetic engineering to rectify these design flaws. After all, when GM was underperforming, President Obama fired their CEO Rick Wagoner and replaced him with a guy named Fritz. It certainly seems like he could take advantage of those personal approval ratings and allow a guy named God to step down in order to "spend more time with his family" as a way of anointing Steve Jobs.

Too much? Let me know what Sarah Palin says about this column on her Facebook page.

The Burlesque Nocturne Show is this Friday, October 23rd (but if you already picked up the paper, you know this) and I feel the need to mention the music will be provided by Big Daddy Alright, one of Texas' finest jump blues bands. I'll be there... will you? Tickets are still available at www.lad-ivinaburlesque.com.

If you love U2 but didn't have the cash to see them a week or so ago (or, like me, were at the fang-tastic Alice Cooper concert), you can catch the next best thing, Mysterious Ways, the ultimate U2 tribute band this Thursday at Lakewood Bar & Grill, 6340 Gaston Ave. in Dallas, along with Le Cure, The Cure tribute band.

Now that there is a little bit of chill in the air, Yourrockslut4ever needs some surf rock! Join me at Lakewood Bar & Grill this Saturday night for one of my fave bands of all time, The Buena Vistas, along with Beatles tribute act Me & My Monkey, The Felons and Nirvana tribute band Aberdeen.

But first, check out the Lone Star Country Club, located at 1849 E Belt Line Rd. in Coppell for the "Boats 'n Hos" Halloween theme party. It's going to take place on the outdoor stage, weather permitting, of course. This show will have it all, from small acoustic to big electric, soulful Texas country to rowdy blues and hard hang-over-inducing eclectic music, people & atmosphere!

Here's the schedule:

BARKIN' OUT LOUD

by Pat "Two Dogs" Snow

You wanna know one of the key things that separate a really good team from the lousy ones? That regardless if they win or lose a game or a season, whenever they play its dramatic. Yeah, you know, gun fight at high noon drama. You gotta admit, the Cowboys got the gut wrenchin' stuff goin' this season. That's the good news.

On the flip side, why do you wanna throttle 'em? Because it doesn't appear that from the players on up through the Coaches and owner that they really learned anything from the debacle that was the end of last season.

They keep sayin' us fans are on the outside and can't really see what's going on. Ok, yeah, but guess what? Sittin' on the outside gives you a pretty good view of the results of what they're doin' with all that so called "inside" work. Duh.

Before we recap last week's NFL action, let's talk some hockey. Like some Dallas Stars hockey. Some pretty doggone exciting hockey.

What's the one word to describe the Stars new system this year? AH-fensive!!

No kidding, this has been fun so far. You know I rarely will make any kind of analysis of a team before a quarter of the season has been played, but we don't have to wait 20 games this year. Now, I'm not gonna get all Nostradamus on your heads and predict how many games they're gonna win, but I am gonna say this team is flat going to be exciting, and that's not going out on a limb.

Where are my concerns? Like I had before last season started, and most definitely before this season started, with Modano and Lehtinen. To be blunt, you are not a star player if you can't be on the ice, nor can't perform to a high level once back on skates.

What's the damage they're doing to the team? When Mo finally gets back on, and IF Jere does, it's highly obvious that neither of these men can take the pounding they once did. What does this do for the opponents? When you know an opponent is either weakened or prone to injury, they're gonna bang bodies hard and often to take them out of the play.

No, it's past time to start dedicating practice and game time to developing younger players into this new system. Mike Modano and Jere Lehtinen deserve to be retired and given one of the best farewell parties this cities ever seen. They then need to be placed in the Stars hockey hall of fame. Let's honor them the right way, not have them endure any more punishing seasons.

Ok, ok, let's talk some NFL and we'll start with last week's results.

Some were calling this the upset game of the week, Texans at Bengals, and even though it happened, not enough had the faith to pull their wallets and bet on it. Most still took the Bengals and Vegas made money on it. The juice alone had to be incredible on that one.

The only thing really notable about the Lions at Packers is that Culpepper's attempt to show he's worthy of being a starting QB in the NFL again has been ruined. Culpepper's only really good years were when he was with the Vikings with Randy Moss. Speaking of the Vikes, I liked the contest hosting the Ravens. Baltimore's now 3-3 and that defense is NOT looking anything like when Rex "The Jet" Ryan was coordinator. That D is what allowed Flacco to have a hell'uva rookie season, and the demise of the offense now shadows the collapse of that once vaunted defense.

I watched the Giants at Saints game all the way through. The fan in me was filled to the brim with joy. Hey, I am NOT one of those who anointed NY as THE best team nor THE best defense in the entire NFC or NFL. Even the Cowboys suffering offensive confusion led the game until the end, so it doesn't take a team of the Saints obvious level to beat them. But no doubt that was an exhibition of surgical skill in Brees dissecting that defense. Dallas goes to NO the third to last game of the season, Dec 19, Yehaw.

Many people DID take KC at the Redskins and Vegas dropped a wee tad on that one. Washington media and fans are calling for Zorn's head but you know that's wrong. Zorn had no experience as a coordinator or a head coach yet was still hired over Gregg (now Defensive Coordinator with the Saints) Williams. There's two others that truly ought to get the boot before Zorn, that's Pres of football operations, Vince Cerrato, and Redskins group ownership leader Snyder. Snyder won't can himself, and it looks like his investment group is willing to continue allowing him to make an idiot out of himself and the organization, so Cerrato probably goes first, then Zorn.

Eating humble pie is one thing, eating crow is quite another, and the whole Eagles organization is cutting into that bad birdie right now. Lose to the Raiders? What's the sound of the Michael Vick acquisition? Plop. As in cowpie plop. And the decision to not continue playing Kevin Kolb when he proved he was highly effective running that offense? Ker-plop. The NFC East is not the cream of crop right now.

And it just wouldn't be a fun day if we didn't mention the Bills taking advantage of the Jet's rookie QB Sanchez. Ryan's defense is keeping these guys in the games, but when you start a rookie QB, you live and die with that decision. Does Clemons give NY the better opportunity to win now? Maybe he does but he didn't show it in pre-season. Last year QB rookies Ryan (Falcons) and Flacco (Ravens) had unusual success, but that hasn't carried over to this year. Both last year's wins and this year's losses can be attributed to the defenses. NY's rolled the dice on Sanchez this far, no reason to not continue to season him, even though he's only played ONCE

NFL Week 7

Bye week teams: Broncos, Lions, Titans, Seahawks, Jag's, and Ravens.

Sunday noon games

We've only got six games scheduled, four of which will stink up the joint, only one of those has the possibility of an upset, and two solids.

Stinkin' up the airwaves: Patriots (4-2, road 0-2) at Buc's (0-6), Colts (5-0, road 3-0) at Rams (0-6), Packers (3-2, road 1-1) at Browns (1-5, home 0-2), and Chargers (2-2, road 1-1) at Chiefs (1-5, home 0-3).

After what Brady just did to the Titans, just what do you think the Buc's got comin'? Uh huh. The only think the Rams can PRAY for is that Peyton is yanked after the first half. The Packers lightened up on the Lions last week, electing not to run up the score, they're gonna have the opportunity to be philanthropists again this week with the Browns. And here it is, your possible stinker upset: KC taking out San Diego. Yeah, throw fried twinkies at me, but the Chiefs defense is starting to play better.

If you like football, I mean really like football, you're gonna wanna do whatever it takes to watch one or both of these games. Vikings (6-0, road 3-0) at Steelers (4-2, home 3-0), and 49er's (3-2, road 1-1) at Texans (3-3, 1-2).

Minnesota's firing on all of its cylinders, despite coach Childress's tendency to get conservative at odd moments, and Pittsburgh is trying to show it can play with the big boys this year. Steelers D against Vikings O is gonna be a classic, and I really wanna watch how the Vikings D gets after Roethlisberger.

I've been an advocate of Singletary's 49er's since he took over mid season last year, and these guys are getting' after it. San Francisco is probably going to be using Crabtree in this game, how much who knows, but we'll see if he can at least spread that Texan defense.

3 o'clock games

This isn't gonna be known as the Fab Five by any stretch. Three nose grabbers and two knock down drag outs.

Get the nose pinchers ready: Jets (3-3, road 1-2) at Raiders (2-4, home 1-2), Bills (2-4, road 1-2) at Panthers (2-3, home 1-1), and Saints (5-0, road 2-0) at Dolphins (2-3, home 2-1).

A wonderful case of perception hits reality is the Jets are only 1, count 'em, 1 game better than the Raiders. Bills actually have a shot at beating the Panthers, which that statement alone should be enough to get Coach Fox and QB Delhomme each canned. Now Brees gets to take his magical mystery tour to Miami and shred that defense.

Two that will get your attention: Bears (3-2, road 1-2) at Bengals (4-2, home 1-2), and Falcons (4-1, road 1-1) at Cowboys (3-2, home 1-1). With two offenses that need receiver help, and two defenses that are playing remarkably better, the Bears and Bengals ought to be a really good game to watch. They're both playing inspired and that's what makes football games.

Nobody believes the 'Boy's have a chance against the Falcons, but you know, that's why games gotta be played and not just talked about. Dallas's D is better'n most, they just have trouble closing games off, so Atlanta looks to just stay in til the last. With two weeks to prepare, Romo should've been able to get his head straight, which he didn't do over the off season or training camp. You can believe this is gonna be a good game, bank on it.

7:30 game

When the schedule first game out, we all thought this one was gonna be a goodie, but probably for different reasons than now: Cardinals (3-2, road 2-0) at Giants (5-1, home 2-0). Arizona's starting slow, ace receiver Boldin's got a sore foot, but people are now seriously doubting New York's D (which I have from the beginning) and QB Eli's got a sore foot, too. This should be a hard hitting and fast paced game.

Monday Night Football

Do we have to call this a game? Eagles (3-2, road 1-1) at Redskins (2-4, home 2-1) is not what anybody considered a game played on top of a garbage pit when they scheduled it. Don't try to talk yourself into it, this is a stinker and your best bet is to take your best gal out to dinner to make up for all those Sunday's you had your nose stuck in the telly.

Readers Response:

Two Dogs:

I thought by trading TO to Buffalo the Cowboys were trying to make the team "Romo friendly", but I hear there's STILL friction on the team, is this true? Doesn't anybody have a handle on things? Is this just normal squabbling from guys being together for a long season?

Danny
Corinth

Danny:

You might say there is, and it wouldn't be the normal friction you're referring to. It seems that some time after the Denver game wide receiver Williams was speaking about the pass where Romo tossed it one way and Austin was turning another, resulting in an incomplection. Williams included in his comment that Austin did NOT run the wrong route. IF true, that would mean Romo threw the ball to the wrong area. Romo's assessment of the play is somewhat different, calling it a miscommunication. Let's say Williams is correct, well, that means Romo's NOT taking responsibility for his own mistakes, and what kind of message does that send the team? Let's say Romo's correct, then you now have the alleged top receiver calling Romo out. Either way, that's friction, not a group of players coming together as a team.

TD

Two Dogs:

I'm fine with the length of the seasons for all the sports except the NFL. They don't need to extend the season to 18 games and reduce the pre-season by two, it will only add to player injuries.

Rollie
Saginaw

Rollie:

Let's start with MLB. C'mon, 160 games? What's typically the worst problem that baseball could, and a good amount of the time does, face each playoff year? It's the games from October on run into progressively colder and inclement weather. This makes it difficult for the players and the fans. Take a look at this past weekend in the NFL with the Titans at the Patriots and played in heavy snow! Footballers are accustomed to playing rough in games and in weather, baseball players are not. Take enough games off the schedule so the World Series is held in August. You not only have better weather, but you'll have absolutely zero competition for television time from viewers. I also think both the NHL and NBA who have 84 game regular seasons could be more exciting and effective with shorter seasons. As for the NFL, why have 4 pre-season games? I'd be totally in favor of just having 3-4 scrimmages then get it on with games that count. 18 games would start maybe the last of August for sure the beginning of September and no other changes to the schedule would have to be made.

If the NFL is going to charge FULL prices for glorified scrimmages that don't count, then at least make two of them regular season and give everybody a better deal.

TD

Two Dogs:

You gotta solve an argument for us, what's the best sports movies ever made? Our three top vote getters are: Hoosiers, Rocky, The Replacements, and On Any Sunday. What do you say?

Doug
Plano

Doug:

Hey, if somebody likes it, who cares. I like your pick of Hoosiers, the others not so much. C'mon, dudes, Rocky had minimal boxing. My favorites are Slap Shot and now Whip It. If you haven't seen Whip It, yeah, it's a girl flick, but it's about Texas Women's Roller Derby and if you've never been to one of those events you're flat out missing some good action.

Harley-Davidson Shutting Down Buell

Harley-Davidson is discontinuing the Buell product line of motorcycles and seeking buyers for the recently acquired MV Augusta.

The Motor Company announced the news in its third quarter 2009 report Oct. 15. Worldwide Harley-Davidson retail sales dropped 21.3% over the quarter compared to the same period in 2008.

Buell production will end Oct. 30 and a limited number of new motorcycles will still be available at dealerships. Harley-Davidson will continue to provide replacement parts and service at dealerships for Buell motorcycles and warranties will be honored.

The decision to shut down Buell will eliminate 80 hourly production jobs and 100 salaried positions. A majority of Buell staff will be employed until Dec. 18. Harley-Davidson will incur a one-time cost of $125 million by shutting down Buell.

Harley-Davidson will immediately begin seeking buyers for Varese, Italy, based MV Augusta. Harley-Davidson acquired MV Augusta in 2008.

David Perry's Hot Rod Pinups DVD

Hot rods, hot girls, hot music, hot damn! Grammy nominated photographer David Perry teams up with Gearhead Records on this DVD based on his best-selling book Hot Rod Pin-Ups. This 60 minute sumptuous sampler of classic 50's style pin-up girls ala Vargas features hotties working in the garage, hanging out at the drag strip and cruisin' country roads. The action is set to a smokin' soundtrack featuring Gearhead Records' roster of rock n' roll, pop and punk bands.

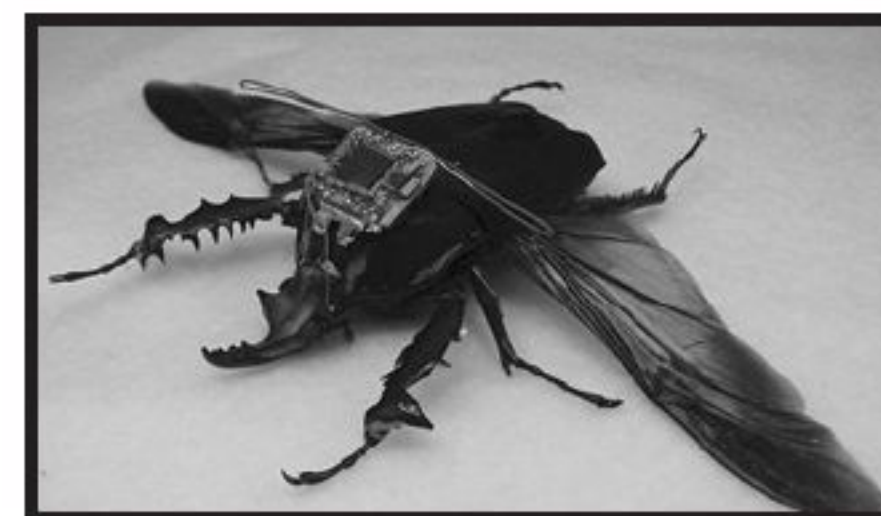

Plus, as an added bonus, you'll get to see David's first-ever video, done when he was just 10 years old. Its a hoot and a real treat.

Other extras include a slide show of the photographs from his newest book for Motorbooks "Hot Rod Pin-Ups Vol. 2", as well as a bio about David.

U.S. Military Create Live Remote-Controlled Beetles To Bug Conversations

Spies may soon be bugging conversations using actual insects, thanks to research funded by the US military.

According to Professor Noel Sharkey, an international expert on artificial intelligence and robotics from Sheffield University, there have been attempts in the past to control insects such as cockroaches, but this is the first time the flight of insects has been controlled remotely.

Professor Sharkey questioned the ultimate military

The US Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency has spent years developing a whole host of cyborg critters, in the hopes of creating the ultimate 'fly on the wall'.

Now a team of researchers led by Hirotaka Sato have created cyborg beetles which are guided wirelessly via a laptop.

Using implants, they worked out how to control a beetle's take-off, flight and landing by stimulating the brain to work the wings. They controlled turns through stimulating the basilar muscles on one side or the other to make the wings on that side flap harder.

application of remotely controlled beetles as you would also need to implant a GPS transmitter and a camera too.

This would be too heavy for even the largest beetle to carry.

The Berkeley researchers suggested the 'cyborg' beetles - part beetle, part machine - could serve as models for micro air vehicles.

The embedded system uses nerve and muscle stimulators, a microbattery and a microcontroller with transceiver. They were implanted in the beetles when they were at the pupal stage.

Three types of large beetles from Cameroon were used in the experiments at the University of California in Berkeley. The smallest was 2cm long, while the largest was 20cm.

Sato and colleagues also said the beetles could serve as couriers to inaccessible locations. The Berkeley team is also experimenting on dragonflies, flies and moths because of their 'unmatched flight capabilities'.

DARPA's ultimate aim is to create cyborg insects that can fly more than 300ft to their target and then stay put until commanded to buzz off again.

Web Surf to Save Your Aging Brain

Surfing the Internet just might be a way to preserve your mental skills as you age.

Researchers found that older adults who started browsing the Web experienced improved brain function after only a few days.

"You can teach an old brain new technology tricks," said Dr. Gary Small, a psychiatry professor at the Semel Institute for Neuroscience and Human Behavior at the University of California, Los Angeles, and the author of iBrain. With people who had little Internet experience, "we found that after just a week of practice, there was a much greater extent of activity particularly in the areas of the brain that make decisions, the thinking brain -- which makes sense because, when you're searching online, you're making a lot of decisions," he said. "It's interactive."

For the research, 24 neurologically normal adults, aged 55 to 78, were asked to surf the Internet while hooked up to an MRI machine. Before the study began, half the participants had used the Internet daily, and the other half had little experience with it.

After an initial MRI scan, the participants were instructed to do Internet searches for an hour on each of seven days in the next two weeks. They then returned to the clinic for more brain scans.

After at-home practice, however, those who had just been introduced to the Internet were catching up to those who were old hands, the study found.

But, Small said, beware how you use the Internet.

"You can exercise your mind by using the Internet, but it depends on how it's used," he explained. "If you get hooked on gambling or eBay shopping, that may not be positive."

The Only Gumball Foosball

This is the only foosball game that is played with chewable gumballs. Gumball machines atop each goal send the bubblegum onto the pitch, allowing players to engage in rapid table soccer with tasty confection. After each goal, the gumball is dispensed from the side of the table as a reward for the goal scorer's superior foosball skills. Eight solid-metal, chromed control rods glide easily in their slots, allowing fluid movement and fast wrist-action for traditional foosball shots including pull, push, and rollovers. Solidly constructed with a sturdy steel frame and a durable laminated playing surface, the foosball table will endure years of party tournaments and impromptu one-on-one play. The table has a shatterproof, tempered glass cover that keeps the gumball in play and playing surface clean.

Wii Full-Scale Heckler & Koch MP5 Machine Gun Controller

Yep, another one to add to the ridiculous Wii accessories list. This time it's a 1:1 scale Heckler & Koch MP5 that was spotted at a trade show in Hong Kong. The controller was made by a Chinese company, and instead of having to find a place to stick your Wiimote and Nunchuck, the machine gun contains all of that functionality, as well as MotionPlus and a rechargeable battery, built-in. There's no word on pricing or availability just yet, but the version pictured above with the orange tip was supposedly created for the US market so it wouldn't look real or anything.

Use Your iPhone To Start Your Car

Keys are one of those objects that seems almost archaic when you think about them. We have so many technologies at our disposal, you have to wonder why we rely on these so heavily. If you don't have a car with a fancy keyless setup, you can now add a Viper StartSmart system that will let you control your car from your iPhone.

The new StartSmart System won't have you driving your car from an iPhone, but you can do a host of other functions:

*Lock/arm

*Unlock/disarm

*Remote car starter

*Trunk release

*Panic or car finder

You can do all of the above functions anywhere using your iPhone or iPod Touch, so long as you have either a data connection or WiFi available.

The App is free, but you'll need the Viper StartSmart hardware in your car. The StartSmart kit will set you back $499, and you'll need to pony up $29.99 a year for service (the first year is free).

Foot Tanning System Gets Rid Of Sock Tan Lines

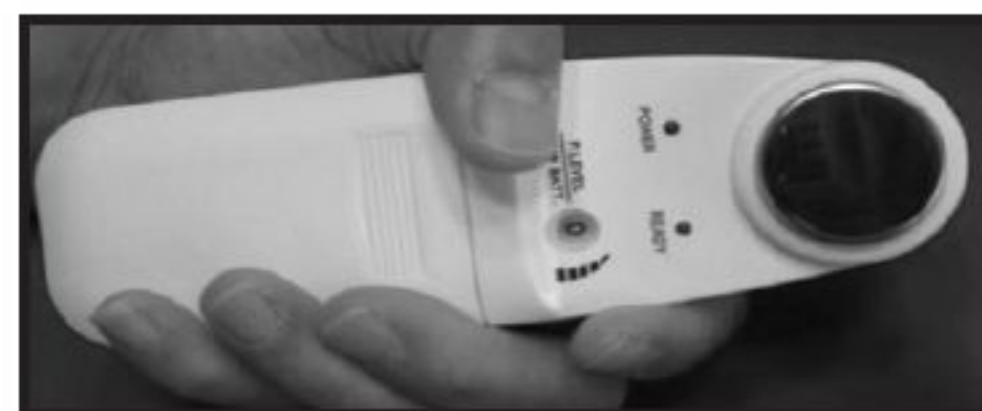

I've had the occasional year where I have the strangest tan lines, one of the most hated ones being that charming sock line. Some are more likely to get those lines than others, but it does happen from time to time. Well now SkyMall has just the solution for that, a tanner just for your feet. No, they're not kidding. Just put your feet in this tanner and it'll get rid of those lines in no time. All it'll take is just a tiny amount of cash, just $229. I'm sure you won't even notice that money is missing.

The Itch Stopper Uses Electronic Energy

Despite how small mosquito bites happen to be, they still are quite capable of making you crazy. Not to mention all of the other rashes and things that make you itch. Anything that has that itchy effect has a way of making your day a little more irritating. Well instead of picking up a cream that barely works, you can try out a different method. This Itch Stopper is electronic and won't leave you with a gooey mess that seems to always rub off on your clothing.

It is said to stop itching entirely by producing mild electronic energy. That energy destroys the toxins beneath the skin and stops histamine release. All of that making it so that you won't be quite so itchy. It's of course FDA approved and will not cause any DNA damage or skin cancer. For something this good it is going to cost you a little extra, but thankfully not too much extra. You can purchase the Itch Stopper for $59.95.

SEX IN THE NEWS

Her Top 5 Fantasies

Men are not the only ones that fantasise about sex. Women may look sweet and innocent, but you may be surprised what goes on inside our heads! It's more than likely your wife or girlfriend will have had an explicit sexual fantasy that she may or may not have been too ashamed to share. Fancy an insight? Then read this top five list, it is sure to mention at least one of her forbidden fantasies.

Making a Sex Tape

As unlikely as this may sound, most women will have fantasised about making a homemade sex tape at one time or another. Why then did she say no when you suggested it? Well, unfortunately, unlike Pamela or Paris, most women won't live out this fantasy because they're worried about how their 'wobbly bits' will look on screen. Add that to the fear of it somehow making its way onto the internet and hey presto you're not going to be producing a porn flick with you and your partner in the starring roles any time soon!

Having a Sex Slave

She may want to tie you down and have you pleasure her with your tongue, or she might just want you at her sexual beck and call. Either way the sex slave fantasy is a very common one! Well who wouldn't enjoy some time devoted entirely to their pleasure? Unlike some of the other top fantasies – with your help, this one has the potential to become a reality! Offer her your services and you may be surprised about the level of kink that you unleash - because this scenario appeals to her naughtier side.

Sex with Two Men

Just as you may enjoy the thought of two beautiful women tending to your every need in the bedroom, for a woman, being adored by two gorgeous men is an arousing thought. So it probably isn't a surprise that this is one of the most common female fantasies. Some may simply fantasise about being pleased by one man at a time, while others may imagine more hardcore acts like double penetration. Whatever the level of grandeur, this scenario is fun for a woman to imagine because it is so taboo. But don't worry, most women in relationships realise that this fantasy is best left as just that – a fantasy.

Sex in Public

The idea of indulging discreetly in some sexy play, while random strangers pass by, is enough to get even the shyest girl turned-on. The thrill of breaking such a huge taboo and the fear of potentially getting caught can contribute to a very arousing fantasy.

Safe Rape

Safe or consensual rape is a massively popular fantasy among women. This plays out very differently from a real rape scenario. While it may be passionate and forceful the woman is always consenting and in control. She may imagine a gorgeous man seducing her, arousing her body and removing her clothes while she protests; but on the inside, she'll love every minute of it, and inevitably will have an incredible orgasm! This female sex fantasy is so popular because it allows a woman to have wild and dirty sex, without the guilt that often follows.

Morgue Worker Admits To Sex With More Bodies

Kenneth Douglas added to his ghoulish count today, admitting he had sex with two more bodies while he worked at the Hamilton County morgue.

Douglas, 56, of Westwood, pleaded guilty to two counts of gross abuse of a corpse before Visiting Hamilton County Common Pleas Court Judge Richard Niehaus. He could be imprisoned for a maximum of three years at his Dec. 10 sentencing.

Douglas was employed for 16 years, from 1976-1992, as a night attendant at the morgue. He told authorities previously that while there, he invited women in and partied with them with drugs and alcohol. He also admitted to having sex with bodies being stored while awaiting autopsies.

He is currently serving a three-year sentence for having sex with another corpse – that of Karen Range, an 18-year-old murder victim who was nearly beheaded in 1982 and had been in the morgue cooler for hours.

Topless Barista Busted

A South Hill barista has been arrested and charged with indecent exposure after deputies say she was seen standing – topless – outside Bikini Bottom Espresso stand on 176th Street.

"I saw her out of the corner of my eye," said Robin Whitten of Olympia. "I hadn't approached the stand yet, and you could see boob, and of course a bikini bottom, and I said, 'No way! This chick is not standing out there with no shirt on.'"

Whitten said she was shocked by the sight of the topless barista and reported it to the Pierce County Sheriff's Department.

Detective Ed Troyer said a deputy responded and found the barista wearing nothing but small pieces of black tape covering the nipple area of her breast. "You couldn't even tell until you were really close," said Troyer.

Deputies cited, then released 19-year-old Megan Lenn on suspicion of indecent exposure, a misdemeanor.

Lenn's sparse outfit was part of what some call "pasty Wednesday" at Bikini Bottom Espresso.

Manager Cheryl England said pasty Wednesday is being cancelled following Lenn's arrest.

"We tried it once. We got into trouble for it. We're not going to do it again," said England, speaking by telephone.

Elton John Regrets Waiting For Sex

Elton John regrets not losing his virginity until he was 23. The pop legend - who married husband David Furnish in an extravagant civil ceremony in 2005 - wishes he hadn't waited so long until he started having sex.

He said: "I made the mistake of not having sex until I was 23! I loved being with another man and felt relieved that I finally knew who I was. I made the mistake of falling in love too soon because I was naive and romantic. My advice to you is to never chase love. It will find you when you least expect it. Have fun, have lots of safe sex and enjoy your sexuality. Be proud of who you are."

The 'Candle in the Wind' singer admitted his sexual regrets when he was asked to write a letter to his 16-year-old self, to offer advice on how to be happy in life.

All About Porn: Releases, News and Stars!

Woman Accused Of Broadcasting Porn Near School

A woman is accused of showing a pornographic video out the window of her Grand Forks home near an elementary school. Police said 37-year-old Nicole Altendorf bit an officer's arm and kicked him several times in the groin as he tried arrest her Friday. In the squad car, she allegedly spit in the officer's face.

Altendorf faces felony charges of simple assault, contact by bodily fluids and preventing arrest, along with misdemeanor charges of possessing drug paraphernalia and disorderly conduct.

Drugstore.com Launches Site To Carry Sexual Health Products

Online retailer Drugstore.com Inc. has launched SexualWellBeing.com, the company's newest e-retailing site, which will sell sexual health products.

"Our goal is to provide the best value, selection and customer experience for people shopping for sexual health products online," David Lonczak, vice president and chief marketing officer, told Internet Retailer. "Initial response from customers has been positive as we are able to offer a broader selection of products on SexualWellBeing.com than on Drugstore.com and look forward to adding products requested by customers in the future."

Books, games, positional furniture, vibrators, lubes, condoms and more are carried on the new site. Drugstore.com does carry some similar items.

Angel Congrats Deen for Heeb Honor

BurningAngel founder and "Queen of Alt Porn" Joanna Angel is pleased to announce that one of the most incredible Jewish males in adult cinema, James Deen, has been recognized by Heeb magazine as one of the 100 most important Jews in the world today.

"James Deen has starred in more than 2,000 adult films over the last five years," proclaims Heeb. "And with impressive awards like Male Performer of the Year at the 2009 AVN Awards (he was the youngest male ever to win that prize) to his (porn) name, it's safe to say that Deen and his 10-inch penis aren't just dicking around."

"I'm pretty shy, but I do want to thank Heeb for this merit," says Deen.

"I was inducted into the Heeb 100 in 2005—and now James in 2009," says Joanna Angel. "I think it's kind of cute—and it's very evident that Heeb has very good taste in Jewish porn stars."

Heeb magazine was brewed in Brooklyn in 2001 as a take-no-prisoners zine for the plugged-in and preached-out. Covering arts, culture and politics in a voice all its own, Heeb has become a multimedia magnet to the young, urban and influential.

Deviance

SkinworXXX/Adam & Eve

I gave this to my friend Laci to review cause she wanted some hardcore porn to review, but since one of the stars, Kagney Linn Karter, is featuring this week at Spearmint Rhino I decided to review it myself from memory.

If you like you sex on the hard and deviant side than you'll definitely want to own this release. The main reason to get this is to see Eva Angelina in four of her hardest and hottest scenes ever filmed. You get pretty much everything taboo here: interracial, double penetration, threesomes and a heart attack inducing foursome at the end with Eva, Teagan Presley, Sunny Leone and Alexis Texas.

Pretty much every scene is a winner but my favorites scenes featured Eva Angelina and Teagan Presley, but Alexis Texas is fast becoming my favorite blonde. This DVD is well worth buying if you're looking for something more than the girl next door type which is my type. 4/5 -Gil Tha Thrill

In "Stoya: Perfect Picture", contract star Stoya takes on life's trials and tribulations with her succulent pussy and tight ass in this moving sexual drama! As she explores the secrets of amour through her sexual ploys, Stoya leaves the men begging for more. She continually conquers and then moves on to find a new man to toy with. Also featuring a-listers Cassia Riley, Madison Ivy, and Kelly Summer, "Stoya: Picture Perfect" is a perfect vision of lust, love, and eroticism

Obsessions Third Degree Films

Look out! XXX's nastiest and hottest performers have become obsessed and they're f'cking like crazed animals. These gorgeous and insatiable daies offer their asses, pussies and mouths with a rare and unbridled passion. Hold on tight 'cause they're liable to brake your cock off as they grind and slam their moist, warm pussies on your shaft. Warning: Obsessions will be habit-forming!

AIN'T NOTHIN' BUT A G-STRING!

Are you ready for THE burlesque show of the year? Well, it's here, folks, and Diamond Jim and Lady Divina have once again pulled out the sparkliest, fringiest, most dazzling stops and are bringing Burlesque Nocturne to the Lakewood on Friday, Oct. 23rd. This will be the Golden Globes (pardon the pun) of Texas burlesque this year - for none other than Miss Exotic World 2009 Kalani Kokonuts will be headlining this show! Kalani is a true showgirl - her stage presence is unbelievable! Her costumes and exquisite features not only make her a burlesque queen, but a photographers dream, such as one of her favorite 666 Photography down in Austin! Visit Kalani on the web at <http://www.kalanikokonuts.com>!

Also appearing will be Renea LeRoux, better known as the "Southern Belle from Hell." This Amazonian beauty (for real, tall and gorgeous) is well known for her costuming, winning handfuls of awards for her unique take on such epic periods as the 1700's in her costumes. She headlines for the Syrens of the South in Atlanta, Georgia. I had the pleasure of catching her in the Queen of Burlesque showcase in New Orleans, and let me tell YOU, damn!

Of course, what Divina show would be complete without the triumvirate of tatas - Lady Divina, Ginger Valentine and Rose Darling.

Lady Divina is the other half of the Divina production team (who also brings you Naked Girls Reading). Not only has she won hearts all over, she also captured the Best Soloist at the 2009 Texas Burlesque Fest! Visit Divina at <http://www.ladivinaburlesque.com> to keep tabs on this luscious lady!

Ginger Valentine is the founder of the Ginger Valentine Burlesque Charm School, dedicated to teaching women the art of the bump and grind, located at the Girls Room in Dallas, with new classes opening up in Carrollton. Check <http://www.gingerv.com> for details on how to get your shimmy on!

Rose Darling is truly the lovely darling of Dallas burlesque! Not only is she a VERY talented performer, she also creates the art you see for many burlesque fliers and ads you see around town! <http://www.rosedarlingburlesque.com>, check out the poster she has for sale from Nouvelle burlesque, it's amazing!!

We will also have the titillating two-some from the Jigglewatts in Austin, Ruby Joule and Coco Llectric! These two lovely ladies will seduce you with their sultry ways, then charm you outta your heart with a smile and electrifying stripteases.

I also hear we will have the winners from the Nouvelle Competition coming in (if you didn't catch them at Nouvelle, you missed quite a show!) Miss Cora Coquette will also be showcasing her favorite "assets" as well... Which is why she was dubbed "the fiercest fanny in Texas" by Black Maria of the Lollie Bombs! Be sure to also say hi to my fab panty wrangling buddies Vinny Velour and Valerie!

So, with so much INCREDIBLE burlesque going on, we know your head right on over to the Lakewood and get your tickets, yes? This show will sell out faster than you can figure out what to wear (I suggest some nice formal evening wear) so reserve your seats NOW! <http://www.dallasburlesque.com> for info on how to obtain your seats, or at the Lakewood directly. See you there!

Did I Ever Tell You The One About... And other strange oddities of the world

Man Busted With Weed Stuck To Head

Police in central Pennsylvania say they've nabbed a real pothead. They say an officer spotted 29-year-old Cesar Lopez inside a convenience store with a bag of marijuana stuck to his forehead.

Investigators say Lopez was seen peering inside his baseball cap early Saturday morning in Lebanon, about 75 miles northwest of Philadelphia. When Lopez looked up, the officer noticed a small plastic bag appearing to contain marijuana stuck to his forehead.

Police say the officer peeled the bag off Lopez's forehead and placed him under arrest. Authorities say the sweatband of a baseball cap is a frequent hiding place for drugs.

'Lottery Winner' Causes Riot At Ohio Coat Store

Police say an Ohio woman being driven around in a limousine announced at a coat store she'd won the lottery and would pay for everyone's purchases but ended up causing a riot when customers realized it was a hoax. Columbus police Lt. Michael Deakins says the woman announced Tuesday she'd spend $500 on everyone at a Burlington Coat Factory, prompting customers to gather at registers and call relatives.

When police arrived, 500 people filled the store and another 1,000 were outside. Cashiers rang up sales before discovering the woman had no money. Angry customers grabbed clothes without paying.

The limo driver turned the woman in. Police say she was arrested on three outstanding warrants but wasn't charged for the coat store chaos pending a mental health evaluation.

Drunk Dad, Son Rob Home, Son Passes Out

Officials say a drunk father and son burglarized a home and were caught after the son was found passed out under the invalid homeowner's bed. DeKalb County Sheriff Jimmy Harris said Wednesday that a 37-year-old man and his 19-year-old son were arrested Sunday.

Harris said they broke into the home around 2 a.m. Sunday and took car keys, medication, about $200 in cash and $100 worth of jewelry. They were about to leave when one of the residents woke up, and they hid.

The father sneaked out but Harris said the son apparently passed out in his hiding place under the homeowner's bed. The homeowner's wife found him around dawn and called a neighbor and police. The neighbor turned out to be the son's grandfather. He turned the young man over to police.

Once In A Black And Blue Moon...

A German man mooning at railway staff in a departing train got his trousers caught in a carriage door and ended up being dragged half naked along the platform, out of the station and onto the tracks.

The 22-year-old journalism student shoved his backside against the window of a low-slung double-decker train when staff forced him off in Lauenbrueck for traveling without a ticket, a spokesman for police in the northern city of Bremen said.

Instead, dangling by his trousers, the man got pulled along for about 200 meters, all the while managing to keep his legs away from the wheels of the train.

The ordeal ended when a passenger pulled the emergency brake. Rescues services were called in, causing rail services between Bremen and Hamburg to be suspended for over an hour, delaying 23 trains.

The man -- unharmed except for cuts and bruises -- now faces charges of dangerous interference in rail transport, insulting the train staff, and may face sizeable a compensation claim for the delays he caused, police said.

Saudi Woman Sees Red Over Gitmo Jibe

A Saudi woman is suing for divorce after she found out that her husband had branded her "Guantanamo" on his cellphone. The wife took a look at the phone when her husband of 17 years left it at home, only to discover that his phonebook entry for her came under the name of the notorious US war-on-terror prison in Cuba, the Al-Watan newspaper reported.

Victim Finds Robber Applying For Job

Police said a man accused of stealing a woman's wallet was tracked down by his alleged victim after he made his getaway on a bus and later tried to fill out a job application. Springfield Capt. Lee Bennett said Thursday that Demot Weaver robbed the woman as she was pulling out money for the fare at a bus stop.

Bennett said the woman ran to get her boyfriend, and the two followed the bus in the boyfriend's car.

Police said the pair followed the 25-year-old Weaver to a restaurant, where he was applying for a job. When Weaver saw the woman, he ran away but was arrested by police.

Mexico City Puts 1,300 Overweight Police On A Diet

Some Mexico City cops are taking a bite out of more than crime. The Mexican capital is putting its 1,300 of its heaviest police officers on a diet, concerned about rapidly expanding waistlines in the force.

At least 70 percent of the 70,000-member force is overweight, said Nora Frias, the city's Public Safety deputy secretary for citizen participation. The diet program will start with the officers with the most serious weight-related health problems.

"We can't tell them, 'Don't eat sandwiches and tacos,'" Frias said. "What we can tell them is if you eat one sandwich today, if you eat three tacos today, then balance it with some vegetables."

She said officers will be given blood and cholesterol tests to determine a personalized diet plan for each.

Mexico is quickly catching up with the United States as one of the world's fattest countries, according to the Mexican government. Nearly half of Mexico's 110 million people are overweight, and the number of fat children has climbed 8 percent a year over the last decade.

News, Rumors and Gossip

Senator Lindsey Graham's Awkward Response To Gay Rumors

South Carolina Senator Lindsey Graham was caught by surprise last week with a question about his sexuality. Mike Stark, who blogs at The Crooked Dope, approached the Republican lawmaker to ask him about rumors he's gay.

In May, openly lesbian politician Linda Ketner outed Graham and two other South Carolina lawmakers in an interview published on the progressive political blog Fire Dog Lake. Graham, who sits on the Armed Services Committee, could barely manage a blank stare when asked if the rumors were true.

"You're aware of a lot of anonymous comments made by people who are afraid of a powerful senator from South Carolina regarding homosexuality," Stark asked Graham as the men walked down a corridor.

"Yeah, but this is a little bit ..." Graham interrupted.

"So do you have to answer questions about that? I mean, I know a lot people from the Christian right elect senators from South Carolina," Stark continued.

"This is different to me," Graham responded referring to a previous question concerning questions he raised during Justice Sotomayor's confirmation hearings. Graham had asked Sotomayor to answer anonymous rumors concerning mostly her temperament.

"I'm guessing after a long career in the military, you're not going to dignify these rumors with any kind of comment?" Stark offered.

Toronto Wins Bid To Host World Pride 2014

World Pride is bringing its giant Gay Pride event to North America. Toronto will host World Pride 2014, Toronto Pride announced on Sunday, making it the first city outside of Europe to host the event. Toronto Pride puts on the city's annual Gay Pride festival, one of the largest gay events in the world, attracting over a million revelers to the city's gay neighborhood along Yonge Street.

Organizer InterPride is hoping it can shake off controversies that have marred previous events. In 2000, the Vatican pressured Rome officials to pull out its financial support. And a violent Israeli-Lebanese conflict forced the cancellation of the 2006 event in Jerusalem.

Advocates Want Hate Crime Law To Include Transgenders

LGBTQ advocates are pushing the state legislature to amend New York's hate crime law to include gender identity. Under the current state law, prosecutors can classify assault as a hate crime if it stems from the victims' sexual orientation, but crimes against transgender victims do not necessarily qualify. One of the leading advocates for reform is Carmella Etienne, 23, who was attacked in Queens in July by two men shouting anti-gay slurs and threatening to cut her throat.

Her attackers' use of homophobic slurs is being used to prosecute them under New York State's hate crime law, but the taunts about her gender identity do not classify as a hate crime. Etienne tells the Times, "It scares me to death, what happened to me so close to home. A crime is a crime. I shouldn't be treated any differently because of who I am." The hate crime charge could result in a minimum three-and-a-half-year sentence; had the attack not qualified as a hate crime, the potential punishment could have been drastically less.

Transexual Sues Health Insurer For Refusing To Cover Breast Implant Surgery

British transexual living in Germany is taking her health insurer to court after the company refused to pay for breast implants. She argues that the operation should be covered as part of gender reassignment procedures.

In October 2006, Smith started her new life as a woman and chucked out all her mens' clothes. "I didn't even have any more mens' socks," she said, adding "I never regretted my decision."

Smith went to cosmetic surgeons, took hormones, visited a psychologist and started the process of getting a sex change. In May 2008, she officially changed her gender on her British documents. These days her former wife has become one of her best friends.

But she is still suffering. Her breasts started developing when she began the hormone treatment, but they started growing in the wrong place. "They are not on the front of the chest, but rather far too far on the side," said Smith.

According to Smith, several doctors have agreed that it is necessary to carry out the operation, for both medical and psychological reasons. But when she requested that the German Employees Health Insurance Fund (DAK) cover the $9,000 in costs, the company refused. Now, Smith is challenging that decision in court.

The health insurance company says that Smith's operation would be cosmetic surgery that insurers are not required to cover. State insurers pay for cosmetic surgery only in exceptional situations, such as breast cancer or if a breast has been lost in an accident.

In 2004, Germany's Federal Social Court ruled that public health insurers generally do not have to pay for breast augmentation or reduction operations. The court argued that even if a patient is suffering psychologically because of breast-related issues, the funds still don't have to cover the operation. They are only required to cover the procedure in certain cases where a physical anomaly is disfiguring.

At the start of the trial on Wednesday, DAK representatives made a concession to Smith, saying they would appoint an evaluator to determine whether an operation would correct a physical disfiguration. Smith is to be examined over the next few days to check how necessary such an operation is, DAK representative Wolfgang Ahrens said after the hearing.

'Naked' Scanner In Airport Trial

A trial of a scanner that produces "naked" images of passengers has begun at Manchester Airport. The authorities say it will speed up security checks by quickly revealing any concealed weapons or explosives.

But the full body scans will also show up breast enlargements, body piercings and a clear black-and-white outline of passengers' genitals.

The airport has stressed that the images are not pornographic and will be destroyed straight away.

Sarah Barrett, head of customer experience at the airport, said most passengers did not like the traditional "pat down" search.

At Manchester Airport's Terminal 2, where the machine has been introduced, passengers will no longer have to remove their coats, shoes and belts as they go through security checks.

Ms Barrett said the black-and-white image would only be seen by one officer in a remote location before it was deleted.

Passengers could refuse to be scanned, she added.

Animal Sex Farm Arrests

Police are investigating a farm which allegedly promoted itself as a destination for sex with farm animals.

58-year-old James Tait - who was convicted in 2005 of trespassing on a neighbour's ranch to allegedly have sex with horses - has been caught with his pants down, accused of bestiality on another US farm.

He was charged with three counts of felony animal cruelty. Kenny Thomason, who lives with Tait in Maury County, was also charged with two counts of the same offence.

"They've been having sex with full-grown horses," Maury County Detective Terry Chandler.

"(Tait) has been here for four years, and it looks like it has been going on for some time."

Det. Chandler said the pair lived on the farm owned by Mr Thomason, which housed 13 horses, Shetland ponies, goats and dogs.

The detective said it was suspected people had been having sex with the ponies and dogs, as well as the larger horses.

Police were tipped off after an anonymous person who had visited the alleged sex farm emailed authorities photos of the a man performing bestiality.

Authorities had also discovered several video tapes explicitly showing men performing the acts on the farm animals leading them to believe it could be a haven for animal sex.

Tait was arrested in 2005 for trespassing into a neighbour's farm to allegedly have sex with the horses, a crime which is believed to have resulted in another man's death.

Tait pleaded guilty to the crime, but admitted a jury would have "most likely convict him" .

He was given a one-year suspended sentence, a $300 and was ordered to do eight hours of community service

Both Tait and Mr Thomason are each being held on more than $100,000 bail, Det. Chandler said.

A Hooker In Las Vegas

A guy is walking the strip in Las Vegas and a fantastic-looking Vegas hooker catches his eye. He strikes up a conversation and eventually asks the hooker, "How much do you charge?"

The Hooker replies, "It starts at $500 for a hand-job."

The guy says, "$500 dollars! For a hand-job! Holy crap! No hand-job is worth that kind of money!"

The hooker says, "Do you see that Denny's on the corner?"

"Yes."

"Do you see the Denny's about a block further down?"

"Yes."

"And beyond that, do you see that third Denny's?"

"Yes."

"Well," says the hooker, smiling invitingly, "I own those. And I own them because I give a hand-job that's worth $500."

So the guy says, "What the hell? You only live once. I'll give it a try." They retire to a nearby motel. A short time later, the guy is sitting on the bed realizing that he has just experienced the hand-job of a lifetime, worth every bit of $500.

He is so amazed, he says, "I suppose a blow-job is $1,000?"

The hooker replies, "$1,500."

"I wouldn't pay that for a blow-job!"

The hooker replies, "Step over here to the window, big boy.. Do you see that casino just across the street? I own that casino outright.. And I own it because I give a blow-job that's worth every cent of $1,500."

The guy, basking in the afterglow of that terrific hand-job, decides to put off the new car for another year or so and says, "Sign me up." Ten minutes later, he is sitting on the bed more amazed than before. He can scarcely believe it but he feels he truly got his money's worth. He decides to dip into the retirement savings for one glorious and unforgettable experience. He asks the hooker, "How much for some of that sweet stuff down there?"

The hooker says, "Come over here to the window, I want to show you something.

Do you see how the whole city of Las Vegas is laid out before us: All those beautiful lights, gambling palaces, and shows?

"Damn!" the guy says, in awe, "You own the whole city?"

No," the hooker replies, "but I would... if I had a vagina instead of this penis."

Josie Romero, The Eight-Year-Old 'Sex Change Girl' Who Was Born A Boy

Josie Romero loves the colour pink, braiding her hair and having her fingernails painted. But life has not always been easy for this sweet and charming eight-year-old, who was born in the body of a boy.

The transgender youngster, then called Joseph, knew at the age of four that she was the wrong sex and even told her parents: 'I am really a girl.'

At five, she was refusing to have her hair cut and only wore colours like orange which were nearest to girly pink. By the time she reached six, Josie had been diagnosed as transgender and was beginning her transition to becoming a female.

Mother Venessia, 42, said: 'When she was a toddler, she was always trying to turn her boy toys into girl toys.

'She used to take her army figures, wrap them up and rock them like a baby. As she grew older and started to talk, she always said: "I'm a girl". 'We used to correct her and say: "No you're a boy".

'But by the time she was four, she was insisting: "No I really am a girl". 'We started to realise she wasn't just playing. She would always correct anyone who called her a boy. 'She'd wrap one of my scarves around her waist to make a skirt. It was her favourite game.'

Venessia and her husband Joseph, 42, an airforce engineer, from Vail, Arizona, made the brave decision to tell their daughter's story to help other parents of transexual youngsters.

Venessia said: 'When Josie was four we adopted a two-year-old girl, Jade, from China because we lived in Japan at the time and wanted to help a child in need.

'We were a worried Josie would jealous of a new sibling, but she was so excited to have a sister. They loved playing together and there were even more girls toys around.

'We'd accepted Josie was a bit different and after about six months something clicked and I thought: 'Oh, we have a gay boy'.

'We were totally fine with having a gay boy. We thought: "As long as our child is happy" everything will be fine. She looked kind of androgenous by the time she was five and people would always ask if we had a girl or a boy,' said Venessia.

It was Josie's paediatrician who finally brought the situation into the open.

'I think he worked it out because of various things Josie had said over a couple of years,' said Venessia. 'He just said to me: 'Look up the word transgender'.

'I went home and started looking up transgender on the internet. At first the only sites I found were medical ones and websites talking about adults. But eventually we did find out that there were other children who thought they were born as the wrong sex.'

'We discovered a site called Transgender Youth Family Allies where there were 100 children who were all going through the same thing as Josie.' Venessia started giving Josie options about how she wanted to live.

'I bought some girls clothes and put them in one side of her wardrobe,' she said. 'All her boys clothes were in the other half.

'Each morning she was free to choose what she wanted to wear - but she always chose girls clothes.'

Josie was referred to a gender specialist who confirmed the diagnosis and the family began accepting Josie as a real girl.

Venessia said: 'It was definitely hardest for my husband, because he felt like he had lost a son. Joseph used to spend time with Joey doing things like jogging and swimming.'

But unfortunately other people in the fiercely conservative environment of the American military base, where the family lived in Japan, were less accepting of Josie and picketed outside her school gates. 'It was horrible for Josie and for all of us,' said Venessia.

'I know it affected her although we tried to protect her from it.

'When we returned to the States last year we arranged for counselling for Josie to help deal with what she's been through, as well as for her transition.' Now, in a few weeks' Josie will see her doctor to find out more about puberty blockers, drugs which will prevent her starting male adolescence.

Then, when she reaches the age of 12, she will be given female hormones containing oestrogen. Josie also understands that she will need to have surgery when she is an adult in order to become a full woman.

Her case has already been referred to Dr Norman Spack at Boston Children's Hospital a top specialist in transgender children.

Josie said: 'I am happy that everyone knows I am a real girl, and that I don't have to pretend to be a boy anymore.

'Being a girl is nice because I get to bake and cook in the kitchen wear long hair and earrings.' By the time Josie's family moved back to Arizona last year she had been legally accepted as a female.

Her birth certificate, passport and even her social security number were changed to show her completely as a girl.

Venessia said: 'Unfortunately the local school barred us from enrolling Josie, so we made the decision to home school both girls, which is very rewarding.

'Maybe when the girls are older they will be able to go to high school, but that is still a few years away.' Josie is a spokesperson for transgender children and gives talks to other groups in Arizona. Her mum said: 'Josie is very happy to speak about being a transgender child.

'We feel that by being open about her experiences, it will help other parents and children still coming to terms with their gender.

'The most important thing is to love your child unconditionally.
